

JEWELL AND M'CANN BODIES RECOVERED

SEA GIVES UP MISSING YOUNG AVIATOR AND BROOKLYN HEIRESS.

BOTH DEATHS ARE MYSTERIES

Airman Found on Long Island Beach—Parents Made Nation-Wide Search for Settlement Worker Missing Since December 4.

New York.—The bodies of Miss Jessie McCann, missing heiress, and Aviator A. J. Jewell, who disappeared months ago, were given up by the sea, both bodies having been washed ashore in the terrific hurricane which has been sweeping the New Jersey and Long Island coast.

Jewell's torso was washed ashore at Edgewater, L. I., when an Italian laborer passed that way, 500 feet from Neptune avenue, and saw it. He called a policeman. The body was taken to a morgue.

It was nearly three months ago, on Oct. 13, 1913, that Jewell started to fly from Hempstead Plains, L. I., to participate in an aviation meet on Staten Island, when he disappeared and was never seen nor heard of again.

Miss McCann's Body Found. The body of Miss Jessie E. McCann, the young settlement worker, who disappeared from her Brooklyn home just a month ago, was given up by the sea. It was found by a watchman at Coney Island, having been washed ashore by the heavy surf that pounded the beach during a storm.

Long immersion had made the features unrecognizable, but identification of the young woman by her family was made possible by a signet ring with the initials "J. E. M." and by articles of clothing Miss McCann wore the day she disappeared.

Miss McCann Missing a Month. Miss McCann was last seen by her family when she left her home Dec. 4, supposedly to attend to settlement work duties. A few days later her father, a well-to-do business man, notified the police of her disappearance, and offered a reward of $1,000 for information as to her whereabouts. He also had her photographs thrown on the screens of moving picture theaters throughout the east in the hope that this would lead to the finding of the young woman. Numerous reports of Miss McCann having been seen came from all parts of the country, but investigation proved them to be erroneous. The police now give credence to the story of a woman who asserted she saw Miss McCann the day of her disappearance near a bathing pavilion at Coney Island, where the body was found.

RATE IS DISCRIMINATORY

LACK OF WATER COMPETITION NO EXCUSE FOR HIGHER RATES.

Iron Mountain Railroad and Three Other Roads Are Told Rates Are Unreasonable.

Texarkana, Ark.—Water competition is no excuse for railroads to discriminate against cities having no such facilities, the interstate commerce commission decided in declaring unreasonable and discriminatory higher class rates over the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern and three other railroads from St. Louis, Kansas City and Memphis.

The commission ordered the rates to Texarkana to be the same as to Shreveport from these points. In its decision the commission stated that "while carriers may properly meet water competition, the maintenance of a lower rate to one point than to other points which are intermediate cannot be justified to suppress water competition."

The railroads argued that the low rates to Shreveport were necessary because of water competition.

WILLING TO SELL HUSBAND

Quincy Woman Wants $1,000 to Open a Boarding House—Says She Prefers a Cat.

The letter, after explaining that Mrs. Bedell had seen Miss Chandler's name in the newspapers, continued:

"I see where you need a husband to take care of your property, and to be a father to your baby. My husband is a working man, tired of supporting a family on small pay. I want money to open a boarding house. He will be content to sit with you and tend the baby. As for me, I'd rather have my cat."

INDIANA IRONWORKERS QUIT

Men Allege Employers Violated Agreement to Raise Pay and Working Agreement.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Structural iron workers of this city have struck, alleging that their demands for an increase in pay and for an increase in jurisdiction over scaffold work, have not been acted upon by the contractors.

Employers say the strike of the workers is in violation of an agreement entered into Dec. 13, between the contractors and the Trades Council, and which provides that all disputes shall be arbitrated.

Ernest G. W. Busey, business agent of the Iron Workers' union, asserted that the officials of the Trades Council usurped their authority in negotiating the agreement of Dec. 13, and that it is not binding on the iron workers.

500 FEDERALS ARE KILLED MOB THREATENED MOYER

EQUAL NUMBER OF MEXICANS ARE WOUNDED. SHERIFF REPORTS HIS DEPUTY SAVED LABOR LEADER.

Physicians and Medical Supplies Placed at Disposal of Disabled Soldiers in Battle.

Presidio, Tex.—The battle at Ojinaga, Mexico, between the northern division of the federal army and the rebels continues. Five or six hundred federalists have already been killed and the wounded will be far in excess of that number.

Horrifying sights were witnessed on the American side. Wounded soldiers, with shattered arms, legs shot off and injuries that later proved fatal, struggled through the river and pleaded to the American soldiers for help.

All the physicians and medical supplies available here were placed at the service of the disabled federalists. Before daylight on this side, some of these were so badly injured that they begged the American soldiers to kill them.

From the scarred little village of Ojinaga back a mile from the river, there came what appeared to be an endless line of wounded. The fight on the border here had the appearance of being the most sanguinary conflict of the present revolution.

Federal deserters also came to the river in great numbers, indicating that the bulk of Huerta's army was disposed to give up. All the deserters were not wounded, however, were disarmed on this side, and sent back by Maj. McNamee, commanding the United States border patrol.

Maj. McNamee has more than 300 guns which he took from deserters. During the night the groaning of the wounded on the battlefield on the opposite side of the river could be heard by the American cavalrymen. The firing in the darkness seemed to be heavier than it had yet been.

All women, children and non-combatants of Ojinaga came to the river, and were taken to the American side. The little Red Cross headquarters on this side, where the federal wounded are being cared for, now is as active as a field hospital on a battlefield.

The Star Clothing company works approximately 900 of the 1,700 convicts employed in the prison under the contract system. The Star company also operates a large number of outside plants in various Missouri cities.

The Ruwart Saddle Tree company was not a "holdout." This company has been ready to renew its contract for several months. The minimum number of men called for in other contracts that have been signed are: Sullivan Saddle Tree company, 125; Parker Boot and Shoe company, 200; Central Broom company, 75; Friemeyer Shoe company, 175.

Fruits and Nuts in Old Missouri.

Jefferson City.—Missouri's fruit and nut crop in a normal year is a larger item than is generally supposed to be the case, running in value from $5,000,000 to $12,000,000, according to advance information from the 1914 Red Book of the bureau of labor statistics, imparted by Commissioner John T. Fitzpatrick. More fruit and nuts are consumed during the holiday season probably than at any other time of the year, and therefore what Missouri annually does in orcharding is timely information.

Figures furnished to Supervisor A. T. Edmonston by the federal authorities are to the effect that there are 23,128,107 fruit-bearing trees in the state and in a normal year the yield is 11,567,389 bushels, or enough every man, woman and child a little over three bushels of fruit every year.

The annual strawberry yield of the state runs from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 quarts, not considering the quantity which grows wild. The farm acreage given over to this luscious, palatable and dainty fruit is 8,048.

The cultivated blackberry and dewberry acreage of the state is 5,975, with an average annual production of 6,391,209 quarts.

On farms of the state there are 153,744 nut-bearing trees, with an average yield of 2,823,368 pounds.

The state is credited with having 14,259,673 apple-bearing trees, with an average crop of 9,958,977 bushels. The counties with a normal crop exceeding 100,000 bushels are Adair, Andrew, Atchison, Buchanan, Carroll, Chariton, Daviess, Gentry, Green, Harrison, Holt, Howard, Jackson, Johnson, Linn, Livingston, Macon, Mercer, Nodaway, Platte, Putnam, Randolph, St. Louis, Texas, Webster, Worth and Wright.

When it comes to peaches Missouri's famous Elbertas are equal to, if they don't exceed, the peaches of any other state. Missouri is credited with having 6,588,434 peach trees, producing 1,484,548 bushels in an average year. Among the counties which have over 50,000 bushels a year are Bollinger, Cape Girardeau, Harrison, Howell, Oregon, Ripley, Stoddard and Texas.

Nearly every county produces pears in large or small quantities, the size of the crop depending upon the state of the weather in early spring. The state is credited with having 697,300 pear trees, with a yearly product exceeding 142,547 bushels. Of plum trees there are 917,851 in the state, with a production which generally exceeds 234,372 bushels. Cherry trees on farms and orchards number 623,332, with a crop which generally exceeds 128,334 bushels.

Thousands of pounds of Missouri grapes are annually made into wine at Hermann, in Gasconade county, where are found some of the largest vine cellars of the country east of California. St. Louis and St. Charles counties are included as wine markets. A large volume could be written on Missouri as a fruit state and what the future holds in store for the industry, but the above are the main facts and figures. Every apple county annually turns out some cider.

Major's "Sunburst" Colonels. Jefferson City.—The annual military ball to be given in the executive mansion by Gov. and Mrs. Elliott W. Major Saturday night promises to be a largely attended affair. In addition to officers of the national guard, there will be many guests from St. Louis, Kansas City and other places. A large number of invitations have been issued.

Gov. Major's personal military staff, "the sunburst colonels," will attend in full-dress uniform. They are invariably the most decorative feature of this annual affair.

There will be from 100 to 125 of the national guard officers present. The commander-in-chief, Brig. Gen. Harvey C. Clark of Nevada, staff officers, regimental and company commanders, with a smart sprinkling of lieutenants will attend.

While no orders have been issued to that effect by Adj. Gen. John B. O'Meara, the military council of the state and of the National Guard Association of Missouri probably will meet, as it is the custom of these organizations to hold their annual meetings on the day they attend the governor's military ball.

Smith lived in Callaway county 30 years and for 25 years was a blacksmith. He had an uncontrollable voice which often would range from a low tone to a high shrill pitch, and the voice, it is believed, will prove an important factor in deciding to whom the estate shall go.
